"We are building [the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum] not just to pay our respects to the memory of the victims of an immense tragedy, nor merely to provide the living with a reminder of the horror which even now is slipping out of living memory and into history. We build today for our posterity. With our children and our children's children in mind, we are creating . . . a place of remembrance and mourning."

President Ronald Reagan

"Learn what human beings can do to other human beings. Learn the limits of humanity. Learn, and hope is possible. Forget, and despair is inevitable."

PREFACE

The U.S. Holocaust Memorial Council is pleased to issue the second edition of this Directory, first issued in 1985. One of the Council's most important functions is to facilitate education about the Holocaust by serving as a resource and by creating and sustaining a network among those who are involved in Holocaust programs. It is in keeping with that responsibility that we are publishing this Directory.

The Directory not only provides basic information about an institution (address, phone number and staff), but also informs the reader about its activities, services, purpose, collections and publications.

This issue of the Directory includes listings of 98 Holocaust Institutions in the United States. In these listings are 19 Holocaust museums, 48 Holocaust resource centers, 34 Holocaust archival facilities, 12 Holocaust memorials, 26 Holocaust research institutes and five Holocaust libraries. It should be noted that many of the listed institutions fit into several of the above categories.

The Directory has been widely recognized as a useful guide for organizers of Holocaust programs, educators, scholars, the media, publishers, students, project developers and others.

I would like to thank the following people for their assistance in preparing this Directory for publication: Marilyn Thomas, Larry Karr, Mary Beth Gorr, Barbara Levine, Sam Eskenazi, Alvin Rosenfeld and Jeff Berger.

USER'S GUIDE

This Directory lists institutions and organizations in the United States and Canada that provide services, assemble resources and conduct programs related to the Holocaust. Some of the institutions listed were established for the sole purpose of conducting programs on the Holocaust; others have set aside a division for that purpose.

The Directory is organized alphabetically by organization or institution name. The reader can also locate organizations geographically, by state or by their collections and activities, as indexed in the back of the Directory.

The information on each institution was collected in late 1987 through a questionnaire and, in some cases, a telephone follow-up. In some cases where no contact was made with an institution listed in the 1985 Directory, the information is unchanged. While every effort was made to obtain reliable and up-to-date information, the returned questionnaires were not always complete or accurate. We assume no responsibility for inaccuracies and have reserved the right to edit listings for greater readability. Any errors and omissions will be corrected in the next edition.

One of the most difficult dilemmas faced in preparing the Directory was the characterization of each institution's program or service. It was decided that each organized effort would be categorized in the following way:

Committee–A Holocaust project conducted primarily by a committee consisting of volunteers, which may or may not be staffed by a professional. A committee is usually affiliated with a larger organization.

Project or Program–One or more projects sponsored by an organization whose primary objective may or may not involve the Holocaust. These projects may be national, regional or local in scope. Examples are oral documentation projects, annual conferences, teacher workshops and publications.

Resource Center–A facility which includes a collection of material resources and professional experts such as educators, scholars or administrators who assist in formulating projects and programs.

Memorial–A physical structure, such as a sculpture, that is open to the public and requires maintenance.

Museum–A facility which exhibits objects, photographs and documents and is open to the general public.

Archive–An institution that stores and preserves documents, artifacts, photographs and other materials on the Holocaust and may publish a guide to its collections. The materials may or may not be available to the public.

Research Institute–An institution that conducts or sponsors original research projects related to the Holocaust.

Membership Organization–An organization to which members contribute by serving on committees and helping with staffing responsibilities. The organization may be headed by a professional or a volunteer.

Library–An institution which maintains a catalogued collection of books and printed materials.

Though most of the text should be clearly understood by the reader, one word which appears consistently throughout requires definition. The word "Shoah" is the Hebrew word for Holocaust. "Yom Hashoa" is the Hebrew term for Holocaust Remembrance Day, which is observed in various countries each spring.

THE U.S. HOLOCAUST MEMORIAL COUNCIL

In October of 1980, the American people, by a rare unanimous act of Congress, embraced a noble cause—Remembrance of the Holocaust. Along with Congress, two presidents—Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan—have set our course to create a living national memorial to the Holocaust in Washington, D.C. The goal is to ensure that all Americans know of this dark chapter in human history in order to underscore our national commitment to human rights and human dignity.

Plans for the Museum in Washington have been approved by federal review bodies, and construction will commence in 1988. The United States Holocaust Memorial Museum is scheduled to open in 1990. It will be located on Raoul Wallenberg Place (formerly 15th St., S.W.) next to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, within 1,500 feet of the Washington Monument. All funds to build and operate the Museum will come from private donations raised by A Campaign to Remember, the fund-raising arm of the Council. President Reagan serves as Honorary Chairman of the Campaign.

The Council has also been charged with responsibility for fostering the annual, national, civic commemoration of the Days of Remembrance. The Council consists of 55 members of various faiths and backgrounds appointed by the President, plus five U.S. Senators and five members of the House of Representatives.
